

Robbins Firm Attorneys Named to Georgia Super Lawyers List

The Robbins Firm is pleased to announce that partners Richard Robbins, Josh Belinfante, and Jason Alloy have each been selected as Georgia Super Lawyers for 2015. Associate Matt Parrish has been selected as a Rising Star for 2015.

Attorneys are nominated based on evaluation of several factors, including peer recognition, representative clients, experience, honors and awards, pro bono activity, positions with the bar, as well as other achievements. Inclusion on the list is limited to only 5% of the lawyers per jurisdiction.

Richard Robbins has been selected as a Georgia Super Lawyer every year since the list's inception in 2004. He has over 35 years of experience and has been involved in a broad spectrum of business litigation and arbitrations throughout the country.

Josh Belinfante practices in the areas of government law, commercial litigation and healthcare. The Atlanta Business Chronicle has described Josh as the “go-to guy for Georgia healthcare policy and legislation.”

Jason Alloy has been a Georgia Super Lawyer for two years after being selected as a Georgia Rising Star in each of the four years prior to that, from 2010 to 2013. Jason's practice focuses on business disputes, particularly those involving complex accounting, damages, and financial matters.

Matt Parrish joined the Robbins Firm in 2013. He has represented clients in a variety of complex commercial litigation matters in federal and state courts throughout the United States, including cases involving business torts, commercial contracts, real estate disputes, and government contracting disputes.
