

Robbins Firm Resolves Lawsuit for Information Technology Client

We represented an IT provider in a complex and highly technical dispute regarding the rollout of a network and electronic recordkeeping system for an Atlanta-area dental practice. The issue was whether the dental practice had the right to withhold payment from our client for the work performed due to certain alleged technical issues, which our client vehemently disputed. Robbins Firm attorney Matt Parrish aggressively pursued payment for our client and ultimately obtained a favorable settlement of the claim.

For further information regarding this or the firm's technology litigation practice, contact Matt Parrish.