Alexa Ross, a co-founder of the Robbins Firm, has decided to form a law firm consulting practice, AlexaRossConsulting, LLC (alexarossconsulting.com). Alexa's consulting practice will specialize in identifying a firm's vision, strategizing the process for realizing the vision, and implementing the process. Alexa observed: "Successful lawyers work very hard. Many can be even more successful and significantly less stressed – financially and personally. I am passionate about elevating the environments and outcomes for law firms of every size and status." Alexa also will continue her national practice focusing on the education of students with disabilities and her representation of a select group of business clients. Richard Robbins, a co-founder of the Robbins Firm, stated: "We will miss Alexa, but wish her the best in focusing on helping other law firms grow and prosper."

Alexa graduated from the University of Florida School of Law with High Honors, where she was Managing Editor of the Law Review. Before co-founding the Robbins Firm, Alexa practiced business litigation and education law at Sutherland Asbill & Brennan (now Eversheds Sutherland).
