

State Bar of Georgia Honors Robbins Firm Attorney for Successful Representation of Military Veteran

Earlier this year, the Robbins Firm completed its successful representation of a United States Navy veteran before the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims after the Veterans Administration denied his claim for benefits due as a result of his service-connected posttraumatic stress disorder. In connection with that representation, the State Bar of Georgia last month presented Robbins Firm attorney Alexander Denton with a certificate of appreciation and commendation “for skillful, compassionate, and caring support and counseling to United States prior military service members as part of the Emory Law Volunteer Clinic for Veterans.”
